

Who Is UCCE?

San Diego County Farm & Home Advisor

University of California

California's Statewide University that includes campuses in Berkeley, Davis, Irvine, Los Angeles, Merced, Riverside, San Diego, San Francisco, Santa Barbara and Santa Cruz.

University of California

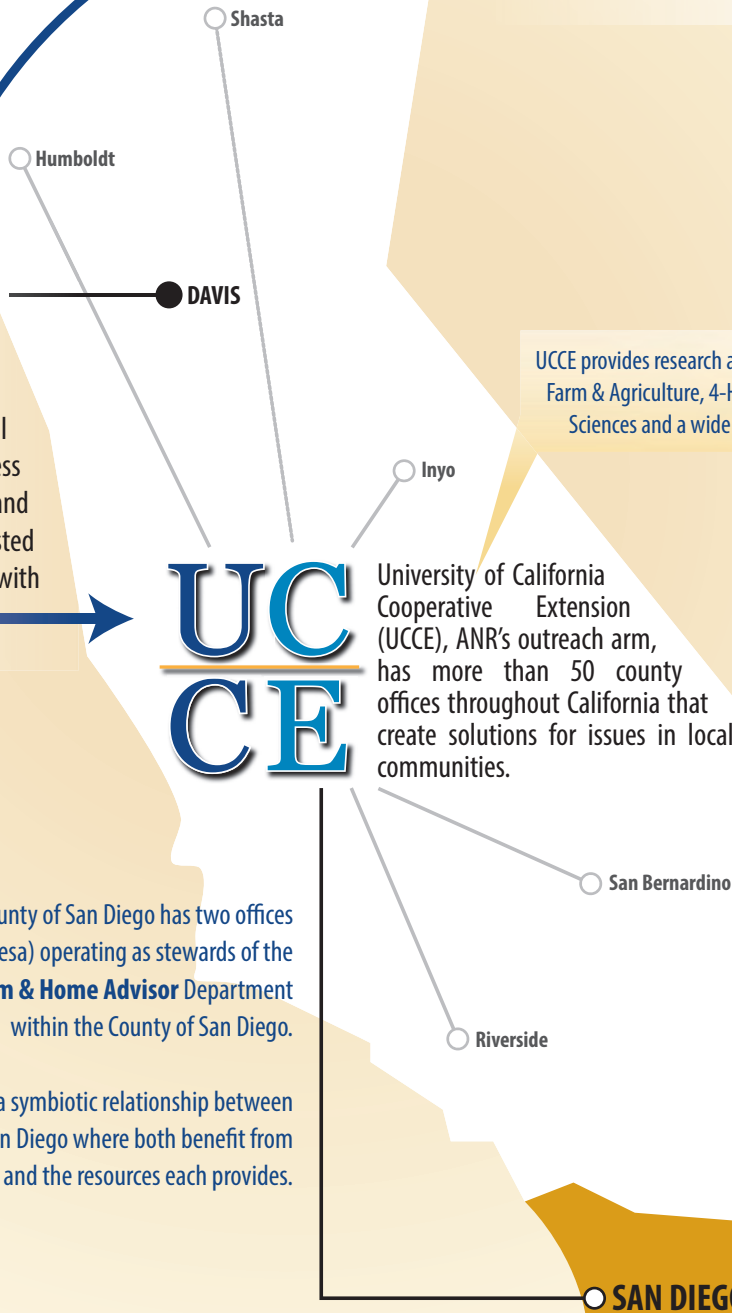

Agriculture and Natural Resources

A division created by the University of California that bridges local issues and the power of UC Research to enhance agricultural markets, help the balance of trade, address environmental concerns, protect plant health, and provide farmers with scientifically tested production techniques and Californians with increased food safety.

UCCE

University of California Cooperative Extension (UCCE), ANR's outreach arm, has more than 50 county offices throughout California that create solutions for issues in local communities.

UCCE provides research and outreach on various issues from Farm & Agriculture, 4-H, Nutrition, Family and Consumer Sciences and a wide range of Environmental Issues.

UCCE in the county of San Diego has two offices (San Marcos & Kearny Mesa) operating as stewards of the university and as the Farm & Home Advisor Department within the County of San Diego.

This unique partnership is a symbiotic relationship between UCCE and the County of San Diego where both benefit from one another and the resources each provides.

We are UCCE San Diego. How can we help you?
